

Jobs, Investment, Certainty ... and Cleaner Air

“Our goal is to be a Clean Energy Superpower”

– Prime Minister Harper, in an interview with the Globe & Mail's Eric Reguly on July 9, 2009

Renewable energy is creating jobs in all provinces today, and it can continue to do so across our nation tomorrow, thanks in large part to federal government support.

The ecoENERGY for Renewable Power Program has been very successful — however, all of its money has now been allocated, creating an uncertain climate for future investment.

Canada’s rapidly expanding renewable energy industry requires a renewed commitment in the 2010 Federal Budget in order to compete for investment and create new jobs.

Renewable energy is an essential component of any Canadian strategy to fight climate change and ensure that 90% of Canada’s electricity comes from non-emitting sources by 2020.

With federal government support, we can work together to create the jobs, investment, certainty ... and cleaner air for tomorrow.
